Mutualink provides an interoperable communications platform for law enforcement agencies and their public and private partners. Mutualink's interface enables a quick, easy-to-use bridge between disparate radio and video systems. Desktop, laptop, mobile and iPad applications mean you can communicate from your desk or from the field with the benefit of secure, built-for-public-safety incident management features. Visit www.Mutualink.net or call 866-957-5465 to learn more.

Critical Response Group, Inc., is a New Jersey based business comprised of Special Operations veterans, former law enforcement executives and technical experts that build and implement Collaborative Response Graphics® (CRGs®) at the state, county, and local levels of government. CRGs are GeoRelevant™ and site-specific Common Operating Pictures that provide a simple visual communication and collaboration tool that is useable under stress by anyone involved in a coordinated emergency response. CRGs are easily understood whether you are a law enforcement officer, firefighter, emergency medical technician, or school administrator. They require very little training and no tactical background to implement, which translates to easy implementation. CRGs are stored, managed and distributed to first responders using BAE Systems' GXP OpsView™ and GXP OnScene™ platforms. The GXP OpsView solution allows authenticated first responders to rapidly access all the site-specific CRGs in their potential response area, regardless of their agency or emergency discipline. By allowing first responders to quickly access information that helps them mitigate a threat, lives can be saved. Critical Response Group works closely with schools and public safety professionals to implement an emergency preparedness technique that has thousands of successful repetitions in real life situations. We can be reached on our web site at www.crgplans.com or call (732) 779-4393.
