

NJSACOP Command & Leadership Academy Graduation

On Monday, February 05, 2024, 106 law enforcement and public safety executives graduated from the NJSACOP Command & Leadership Academy. The graduates were called one by one to receive their diplomas in front of family, friends, and co-workers. Following the presentation of the diplomas, the "Chief Harry Wilde Academic Achievement Award" for the highest achieving student from each Section were announced.

The program commenced with opening remarks from Rutherford Chief John Russo, President-Elect of the New Jersey State Association of Chiefs of Police.

This year's graduates included command personnel from municipal and county police agencies, sheriffs' offices, and county prosecutors' offices throughout New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. The course also included graduates from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Federal Air Marshal's Service, New Jersey State Police, New Jersey Transit Police, New Jersey State Parole Board, and the Rutgers University Police.

The NJSACOP Command & Leadership Academy is designed for command and supervisory level law enforcement and other public safety professionals. Participants are selected by the NJSACOP Command and Leadership Committee and the program faculty. Characteristics of a successful applicant include a commitment to the law enforcement profession, a desire to lead people effectively, and motivation to continue developing skills in interpersonal communication and decision management.
